

Abstract

Method and device and computer program for implementing a safety analysis in systems, in particular in a motor vehicle, the systems or the at least one system having multiple components linked by communication relationships, the components and their communication relationships forming a functional structure of the systems or the at least one system, errors being determined as a function of the functional structure, and these error dependencies being analyzed with respect to the functional structure.

(Figure 1)